Title	Time, Experience, and the A versus B debate
Abstract	I defend the B-theory of time from the challenge arising from temporal experience and develop a minimalist view of temporal passage as temporal succession. The B-theory can accommodate a largely veridical sense of the present as (in various senses) special, and a wholly veridical sense of time as passing.
Supervisor	Prof. Oliver Pooley (Oxford); Secondary Supervisor Prof. Gonzalo Rodriguez-Pereyra (Oxford)
Examiners	Prof. Antony Eagle (Adelaide) and Prof. Robin Le Poidevin (Leeds)
